HUNTER HOUSE – 2019, OIL ON CANVAS, 24 X 36 INCHES

David Klein Gallery, 163 Townsend Street, Birmingham, Michigan, is pleased to announce the opening of Night Moves, an exhibition of new paintings by Trevor Young. A reception for the artist will take place on Saturday, September 7th from 5pm to 7pm.

Trevor Young is known for his depictions of everyday places, illuminated by artificial light. His favorite subjects are what he calls “non-places”; gas stations, ATMs, airports, and fast food stops along the road. All places on the way to your destination, not the destination itself.

Describing his work in the Night Moves exhibition Young states: “I move in the night, when gas stations, roadside stands, and diners awaken from the daytime. This is when I become active and alert. These modest architectural structures selected from my trips to Detroit and its suburbs take on a new sense of geometry and identity as the sun vanishes. The architecture in my work is about the essential parts of its form and I remove everything else. Light hovers above, but not from the moon. An incandescent bulb mixing with fluorescent tubes on the side of a diner captures my eye. Its contrast and excitement are my subject.”

Young’s paintings further his assertion that even the most unpretentious places can be worthy of a second glance. Here he offers us moody nighttime images of favorite Detroit spots such as Hunter House, TelWay, and White Tower, all offering seemingly timeless views of American life. Especially beautiful is his painting Skyline (Detroit), a dramatically atmospheric view of the Detroit riverfront with the glowing lights of the Belle Isle Bridge in the foreground.

Trevor Young lives and works in Washington, D.C.
